Join us for this unique opportunity to learn from engineer and building scientist, Dr. George Tsongas. Dr. Tsongas has studied, investigated and aided in the correction of numerous building failures relating to mold and water intrusions. He offers an enlightening overview of the mold and moisture problems affecting housing in the Pacific Northwest. The workshop will distinguish facts from fiction relating to both new and existing homes and help you to understand what mold is, where and why it grows, what the different types of mold are, understand the true health impacts. You will also learn how to inspect for, and identify mold growth conditions, while learning practical and economical techniques to remedy or prevent mold and moisture problems. Indeed, you will learn everything you wanted to know about mold, but were afraid to ask.

About the Instructor: George Tsongas, Ph.D., P.E. is a private consulting engineer and a Professor Emeritus of Mechanical Engineering at Portland State University in Oregon. He has over thirty years experience in dealing with moisture, mold, and rot in buildings, and regularly presents his informative workshops on the subject, providing attendees with practical solutions to resolve mold problems.
